March 05, 2012

MIAMI (AP) – Interjet Airline is launching new service between Miami and Mexico City.

The Mexican company is inaugurating its flights out of Miami International Airport Thursday and says it hopes they will increase Mexican tourism options and enhance South Florida's role as a regional hub for travel.

The privately owned Mexican company Interjet was founded in 2005 and services 28 cities and towns in Mexico. Its A320 aircraft include in-seat videos that can allow passengers a cockpit view of takeoff and landing, as well as women-only bathrooms.
